REPORT OF THE TURKISH SECTION OF THE COMBUSTION INSTITUTE

June, 2016

The main activities of the Turkish Section of the Combustion Institute covers:

The first “Fire and Combustion Research and Applications Centre” is founded in 2016 at Sakarya University. The Centre consists of 50 members and have monthly meetings. We will have a stand in the Exhibition and Conference on Fire Protection in 2016 in Istanbul, Turkey.

The 13th International Symposium on Combustion was held on May 24-26th, 2015, in Bursa, Turkey by Turkish Section of the Combustion Institute, Bursa Technical University, University of Kocaeli and University of Sakarya. The aim of the symposium is bringing common efforts of the scientific communities in soliciting works and promoting the participation of scientists, engineers and students working on combustion. Participants from all countries of the world are always welcome and submission of papers from groups not located in Turkey was greatly appreciated since it is considered a valuable contribution to enrich different points of view as well as to communicate last achievements in the field. All scientific and technological approaches in the combustion field were accepted to the Symposium.

We were one of the official candidates for the upcoming European Combustion Meeting, which will be held in 2017 but after voting Portugal were chosen. We will continue to be volunteer for upcoming symposiums, conferences and summer schools organised by the Combustion Institutes and will be glad to host participants from all over the world.

The Turkish Section of the Combustion Institute website, <http://yanmaenstitusu.org/> is giving opportunity to become a member online and facilities similar to the institute website. We have now 17 active members in our official association.

The members of Turkish Section of the Combustion Institute has organized and attended the following national or multilateral events over the past 2 years:

- SHELL sponsored conference: 4th Fuels and Combustion in Engines Conference held in January 2014, in Istanbul, organized by University of Sakarya and Technical University of Istanbul. There were 12 invited talks, two workshops were held and several posters presented during the conference. The aim of the FCE conferences attracts posters from on-going projects, invited lectures from well-known researchers from all over the world and possible project partners from industry to encourage Transfer of Knowledge between Universities and Industry.
- We attended the seventh European Combustion Meeting, held Budapest, Hungary with many Turkish participants.
- 11 Turkish participants who were informed by our section was accepted and attended International Combustion Institute Summer School, June 19-23, 2016 in Chania, Greece.

The Turkish Section is a non-government and a non-profit organization. The members of the Turkish Section are academic or industrial researchers working in several branches of the combustion. The Turkish Section is represented by its:
