

Call for Nominations: Bernard Lewis Fellowship

Released: 25 April 2018

The purpose of the Bernard Lewis Endowment Fund is to undertake or seed projects that further educational initiatives in combustion research. The Bernard Lewis Fellowship was established to encourage high quality research by young scientists and engineers. Fellowships are awarded at each International Symposium on Combustion.

Eligible recipients must be:

- Students or combustion scientists who have earned their Ph.D. (or equivalent) within three years of the Symposium (2015 or after)
- Author of a paper accepted for the 37th International Symposium on Combustion
- A member of The Combustion Institute

A fellowship consists of a $500 USD cash award, and financial reimbursements for: registration fee for the 37th International Symposium on Combustion, the excursion, the banquet, and hotel accommodations during the symposium. In addition, fellowship recipients receive an electronic copy of The Proceedings of The Combustion Institute, Vol. 37, and a one-year subscription to Combustion and Flame. Recipients will also be recognized in the Symposium program.

Nominations

Nominations must be made by a member of The Combustion Institute who is familiar with the accomplishments of the nominee. The nominee must verify their CI membership and attendance at the symposium.
